CORKY SIEGEL & THE CHAMBER BLUES
and special guest
DOROTHY SCOTT

Is it blues, is it classical? Walking the line between Beethoven and B.B. King and armed with the creative genius and instrumental prowess that have defined his career for nearly four decades, Corky has pioneered an original, genre-busting Chamber blues - a fresh, innovative sound capturing the sparkling qualities of classical music merged with the emotional melodic style of blues, all within an intimate chamber setting. Under Corky's lead, The West End String Quartet and percussionist Frank Donaldson complete the Chamber Blues Band. Described by critics internationally as: remarkable, astonishing, extraordinary, hot, mesmerizing, joyous and outrageous fun, their music and concerts have delighted diverse audiences globally and their genre-defying presentations are drawing new and old concert-goers to places they have never been before. And you won't want to miss Dorothy Scott, who will add a new dimension to Chamber Blues.

LOUDON WAINWRIGHT III
opening act
COREY CARLSON

The Wainwright kids have been hogging the limelight recently, but Pops Loudon is back to remind everyone where they heard it first. They're billing him as "American songwriting legend" on the promotional material, and for once the term verges on understatement. There's no more endangered a species than the wholly original songwriter, and to watch Wainwright in action is to catch a little fragment of history on the hoof. The only conventional aspects of his work are that he uses a traditional six-string guitar and a piano with the regular number of keys on it, but where another man's work might end, that's exactly where Loudon's begins. And, Corey Carlson puts on a magical show with his bluesy voice and totally original tunes.
